Do you want to improve policing for your community?

Your voice can change how Sussex Police works.

We're looking for people to represent their communities and make a real difference. As a volunteer Community Advocate, you'll help influence policing decisions, improve trust, and ensure our services reflect the needs of our diverse communities.

We particularly encourage people from diverse backgrounds, people with lived experience of policing, and people from the worlds of community advocacy, academia, law, human rights and ethics to apply.

What does a Community Advocate do?

- Represent your community and raise concerns, views and lived experience
- Give feedback from your community on police plans, operations and policies
- Review body-worn video footage of our officers working, and give feedback which goes directly to the officers
- Take part in scrutiny panels, ethics groups and local forums

One of our current Community Advocates said "Everyone from professionals to other advisors are very friendly and welcoming, and all opinions and views are valued."

This is your chance to challenge, advise and shape policing; making it fairer, more effective, and more accountable. Interested?
